While skating on the river yesterday afternoon, Dana Bruce of Cliff street, glided over a strip of thin ice and was immediately precipitated into the icy water up to his waist. Disregarding the aid of a large crowd of skaters who gathered near him, Bruce managed to climb out of the water and lost no time in starting for home. Inquiry revealed the fact that ice cutters had been engaged near the scene of the accident only the day before, and that ice of sufficient thickness had not formed to bear the weight of a man. To-day Bruce is able to attend his duties, apparently none the worse for his cold bath.

Town Booming.

The editor of the Bellows Falls Times has been doing some preaching of late on the good advertising that a town gets by doing things that attract favorable attention, citing the street fair held in that village last year as an example of achievements that are worth while. The Times editor is right; it certainly does pay to establish a reputation for accomplishment. By raising $120,000 toward the location of a textile plant within its limits Brattleboro made an enviable name for herself throughout the state. She is now looked upon as a community with a future—a town with the greatest amount of energetic pressure per square inch in Vermont. Not long ago two residents of a Vermont town as large as Brattleboro were discussing the chances of industrial expansion that would follow the development of an enormous water power nearby. "Stop and think," said the optimist of the pair, "what the development of this power will mean to us. Look what Brattleboro has done since the Vernon dam was built." To which the pessimist replied: "Yes, look at what Brattleboro has done and then try to think of any other town in the state that has a sufficient amount of enterprise to do half as much."—Brattleboro Reformer.

In the settlement of the Dr. A. B. Smith estate, the home place was sold to the widow, Mrs. Lizzie P. Smith.

and the Noyes' place, so-called, was sold to Mrs. Charles M. Goodrich of Northfield, the daughter of the late Dr. Smith.

The lecture at the opera house on Thursday evening of last week by Prof. W. E. Howard of Middlebury college was fairly well attended and all who availed themselves of the opportunity of hearing him, enjoyed the address very much and were well paid for the effort to get out.

The New Chelsea Dramatic company has engagements this week as follows: At Williamstown Monday evening; at Stratford Wednesday evening, and at Post Mills Friday evening, at which places they will present the famous farce comedy, "Charley's Aunt."

The many friends of Myron Little, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvah J. Little of Post Mills, who, until within a few years, were residents of this town, will be pleased to learn that he has secured a responsible position as salesman for a large granite firm of New York City and at present is traveling in the West.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sprague have sold the Hinkley place on Main street, which they purchased of Col. C. S. Emery, to Mrs. Ann E. Goss, who will take possession of the same on March 1, when the lease of the present tenant, A. H. Talpey, will expire. This makes the fifth transfer of real estate in the village since the first of January, and there is still room for outside parties to purchase village property.

Dutchess Trousers

We believe that the Dutchess Trousers have more merit than any other Trousers on the market. Every pair is warranted. They will not rip, buttons will not come off, and they are made for hard service. Good materials and first-class workmanship. Prices from $1.00 to $4.00. Your next pair of Trousers should be a Dutchess.
